Abstract. One of the strategic tasks facing the Republic of Azerbaijan is the modernization of social and economic life, application of scientific innovations and international experience in the country's economy. Solving these problems requires the development of human capital, the development of modern knowledge and competencies of the country's population. For this reason, the last 15 years have paid close attention to the development of human capital in our country. The level of development of the country is determined by the level of development of human capital. It is not by chance that in the Millennium Development Goals program the UN notes that for the sustainable development of the country it is necessary to develop human capital.

For these reasons, the development of human capital is paid close attention in the Republic of Azerbaijan. The development of human capital is the goal of the reform of the education system. In many strategic development programs of the country this is clearly defined.
